C. How to Transfer:

Transfer to the asset allocation/investment option(s) on file for the recipient account.

- If the beneficiary on both accounts is the same and the asset allocation on the recipient account is different, this transfer will be considered an investment change. The IRS only allows two investment changes per calendar year or upon the change of the beneficiary.
- Future contributions will be invested in the share class and asset allocation for the recipient account.

Transfer In-Kind.

- Shares will be moved to the new account "as is".
- Will NOT be considered an investment change for the beneficiary.
- If the beneficiaries are NOT the same and the transferred funds are currently invested in an Age-Based Portfolio, funds will be invested according to the recipient account beneficiary age.

PLEASE NOTE: Transferred funds will maintain their existing fee structure, regardless of the fee structure of the recipient account. If you have questions regarding fee structures, please contact your financial advisor for assistance.
